- ① My name is Thanuja Samarasena. I'm 22 years old. I'm from Passara. My father is a labourer in a tea estate. My mother is a housewife. I have only one sister. I studied at Passara Maha Vidyalaya. I studied up to the G.C.E. Advanced Level. But I didn't get through the exam. So, I started to follow the Higher National Diploma course in Human Resource Management at the Advanced Technological Institute (ATI), Badulla.
- ② At the ATI, we were taught theory from the beginning. So, it was easy. Here, we also have to interact with everyone and learn with everyone. So, it is very interesting. I had never visited Colombo before. But during my course, we visited Colombo three times.
- ③ I have already completed the theoretical component of the course. Now, I am following the practical component in a workplace through an in-practical training. I have been getting this practical training in a leading business company in Badulla for the last three months.
- ④ When I told my parents about this course at the beginning, they didn't know anything about vocational training. They asked me why I wanted to follow such a course. But my parents understood the importance of this vocational training after I started my practical training. Then they allowed my sister also to follow a course at the ATI. Now she is following a course in Hospitality Management at the ATI, Badulla.
- ⑤ Those who study here can get a good job. You can even find an overseas employment after you get the certificate. But I like to stay in Passara where I grew up, and contribute to develop my country without going to another country.

Read the following poem and underline the most appropriate response to each of the questions from I - V. (05 marks)

You may see me struggle
 but you won't see me fall.
 Regardless if I'm weak or not
 I'm going to stand tall.
 Everyone says life is easy
 but truly living it is not.
 Times get hard,
 people struggle
 and constantly get put on the spot.
 I'm going to wear the biggest smile
 even though I want to cry.
 I'm going to fight to live
 even though I'm destined to die.
 And even though it's hard
 and I may struggle through it all.
 You may see me struggle...
 but you will never see me fall.

An extended family comprises of multiple generations living together under the same roof. Some extended families may also include grandparents, uncles, aunts, and cousins who share the same household. There are many benefits of living with an extended family. First, family members who are a part of extended families experience emotional bonding. They might not achieve this bonding if they are living further apart. Second, the family members can spend time with their loved ones. Elderly parents might feel lonely when they do not have their companions around them. But living closely with their family members can make them feel happy. Third, one of the primary benefits of living with an extended family is that it reduces the family's financial strain as it is a more affordable option.

A notable feature of an extended family is that its members belong to several

Question 05

Read the following text and answer the questions from I - V.

The first sentence in paragraph ② has been left out.

(20 marks)

- ① When students select their Advanced Level (A.L) subjects, they make their decision based on several factors. One is their preference for certain subjects. There are subjects they like more than others. Another is the inherent skills they have identified in themselves for certain subjects. Whatever the subjects they select, most of them wish to enter a university to continue their education.
- ② The best-known ones are the state universities. For example, the University of Jaffna is today the home of eight faculties with 57 academic departments. The University of Ruhuna, another leading university in Sri Lanka, consists of ten faculties with 57 departments. In fact, each university has several faculties and there are various departments in each faculty. For example, in the Rajarata University of Sri Lanka, the Faculty of Agriculture has four departments.
- ③ There are many subjects in each faculty related to the programme of study. For example, in Arts Faculties in the state university system, you can study subjects from the humanities and the social sciences. In fact, the arts faculty is known as the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences. Here, you find a range of subjects such as classical languages and literature, modern languages and literature, religious studies, political science and geography.
- ④ Most state universities do not charge fees; they teach most of their programmes free of charge to undergraduates. Further, when you enter a university as an undergraduate, you are also entitled to all the facilities provided by the university either free of charge, or at a heavily subsidized rate. These facilities include library use, access to the internet and use of computer labs, accommodation for the most deserving students, etc.
- ⑤ However, there is stiff competition to get into state universities. Because of this, only a small percentage of qualified students get the opportunity since there is only a limited number of places. As a result, the number of private higher education providers in Sri Lanka is growing. The Ministry of Higher Education can grant private institutions degree-awarding authority. Admission to such private institutions too is based on Advanced Level examination results, although admission standards may be less rigorous than at state universities.

Content suggestions for Essay topics (1) (2) and (3)

1. “The digital era has made libraries unnecessary”

Best responses will show

- a positioning of the candidate in response to the given statement. This position could be one of agreement, disagreement, or a combination of both
- arguments supporting whatever position is taken
- different functions of a library
- characteristics of the digital era
- (if the candidate agrees with the given statement) provide some major reasons for libraries being unnecessary

- (if the candidate disagrees with the given statement) show main reasons for why libraries are still necessary
- recommendations / solutions (if any) to sustain libraries or use the digital for the same purpose

2. ‘The cultural centre of every town should be its theatre.’ Do you agree?

Best responses will show

- a discussion of whether culture is central (if they agree) or peripheral (if they disagree) to urban life
- the advantages or disadvantages of having a theatre in the town
- how a theatre would or would not be useful
- a critical consideration of the social life of urban life, who would benefit from it
- any examples that they can provide
- any alternatives they wish to propose

3. “A global pandemic can transform human values”

Best responses will show

- a positioning of the candidate in response to the given statement. This position could be one of agreement, disagreement, or a combination of both
- arguments supporting whatever position is taken
- (if the candidate agrees with the given statement) how human values are transformed
- (if the candidate disagrees with the given statement) how values have not been changed by the pandemic
- Critical comments on why such a transformation happens
- Factual or narrative content to support the topic
- specific examples/illustrations of changes

Notes on the Creative Composition

4. Write a story that incorporates the idea “I am most alone when I am in the company of friends”.
- The statement “I am most alone when I am in the company of friends” need not be provided in the composition as a quotation or sentence. It is sufficient to include the sense of it.
 - The composition has to be closely related to the idea provided, i.e. loneliness in the midst of friends needs to be a central component of the composition
 - The sequence of events/ideas needs to make sense logically, as appropriate to the composition but does not need to have the linear organization similar to a factual essay

Notes on the Film Review

5. Write a review of a film that addresses ethnic or religious divisions in Sri Lanka.
- The film does not need to be produced in Sri Lanka, but must be about Sri Lanka
 - The film can be in any language
 - The film can address either ethnic or religious divides; it does not have to be about both.

Content suggestions for Report on Deforestation in Sri Lanka

(1) Introduction with Problem Statement:

- A definition of deforestation should be provided and a specific theme within the broader topic of 'deforestation' may be chosen
- A description of what this means in the Sri Lankan context
- Topics discussed in the body of the report should be identified, i.e. issues related to deforestation
- A better answer should also bring in the link between deforestation and its consequences

(2) Major themes can be the following, but need not be limited to these:

- Reasons/causes for deforestation
- The environmental impact of deforestation
- The impact on the economy and social life.
- Statistics and other data can be given as support

(3) Measures that can be taken in response:

- Any policy or legal changes that can be used to stop deforestation
- A list of steps that can be taken to stop deforestation by the state / civil communities / police

(4) Recommendations for Prevention / Solutions:

The better responses would provide recommendations on policy as well as environmental, socio-economic and cultural aspects

Question 2
(Reading Comprehension and Précis)
30 marks

2. Reading comprehension and précis.

(a) Read the following passage and answer the questions given below it.

(10 marks)

1. Hardly anyone would deny that human cultures are quite diverse, nor would they deny that this diversity means that humans of different groups experience life differently. However, language structure is not what creates this difference in experience. Culture certainly percolates into language here and there. Why would it not, since people with cultures speak language? However, language reflects culture – as vocabulary, naturally, and also through things like honorific levels of pronouns and geographical ways of situating oneself. But pronouns and topographical terms are, themselves, terminology in their own way. They reflect what life is like for a language’s speakers.

2. What language does not do is shape thought by itself, for instance, the meaningless gender divisions in German that make forks female, spoons male and knives something in between.... Or in terms of how people see the world’s colours, or in terms of whether we think of a cat as a clump of cuteness in the same way as we see a glorious-smelling white glob as a clump of Nivea. Even if you can trick someone into revealing some queer little bias in a very clever and studiously artificial experiment, that weensy bias has nothing to do with anything any psychologist, anthropologist or political scientist could show us about how the people in question manage their existence.

3. Make no mistake: languages, like cultures, differ massively, and go far beyond the terminological features that drift into them from the cultures. ... The degree of divergence is awesome indeed: languages with only a handful of verbs (many Australian languages), languages with no regular verbs (Navajo), languages where a word’s meaning differs according to nine different tones you utter it in (Cantonese), languages with only ten sounds (Piraha), languages with whole sentences that you need only one word to utter (Eskimo), languages with dozens of click sounds, languages with no tense at all (Maybrat in New Guinea), languages with two hundred genders (Nasioi, again in New Guinea), languages where the only ending in the present tense is the third-person singular one (English).

4. But the wonder is how in all of their diversity, these languages convey the same basic humanity. The cultural aspects qualify as scattered decoration. That will sound naïve to many – until they consider what it takes to learn a language, upon which it becomes clear how ancillary the cultural aspect of language is. How much of the Spanish or Russian or Chinese you hacked your way through was “cultural”?

5. If you want to learn about how humans differ, study cultures. However, if you want insight as to what makes all humans worldwide the same, beyond genetics, there are few better places to start than how language works. (Adapted from McWhorter, John H. The Language Hoax) (453 words)

Write the letter of the correct answer in your answer script against the number of the relevant question.

- (1) According to the passage, diversity of human experience is a result of
- (a) differences in language structure.
 - (b) geographical differences.
 - (c) cultural differences.
 - (d) differences in terminology.

- (2) The writer brings in the example of Nivea in order to
- provide a contrast to the example of the cat.
 - show that language is not a deciding factor in thought.
 - use it as an example of a concrete noun in the language.
 - to show that thought is decided by language only.
- (3) The word ‘queer’ (paragraph 2) is closest in meaning to
- strange.
 - different.
 - exciting.
 - forbidden.
- (4) By describing experiments related to language, the writer argues that
- they fail to illustrate real-life behavior and thought.
 - human nature as described by psychologists is similar.
 - their main purpose is changing biases in the human mind.
 - anthropologists and political scientists will find these useful.
- (5) The word ‘them’ in the phrase ‘drift into them’ (paragraph 3) refers to
- speakers.
 - cultures.
 - terminological features.
 - languages.
- (6) The description of languages in this passage implies that
- Languages are limited in their sound systems
 - German and Nasioi are related to each other
 - New Guinea is highly diverse linguistically
 - People find Russian a difficult language learn
- (7) Which of these is not a function of the sentence “How much of the Spanish or Russian or Chinese you hacked your way through was “cultural”?” (paragraph 4)?
- Persuading the reader that cultural aspects are more important.
 - Implying that Spanish, Russian and Chinese are cultural languages.
 - Ending the paragraph with a point that the reader will find convincing.
 - Extending the point that cultural differences are less than linguistic differences.
- (8) The author argues that we all share a basic humanity because
- language and culture are deeply connected.
 - despite cultural diversity all languages are very similar.
 - learning a language is difficult even if we understand its culture
 - all humans worldwide are the same
- (9) Thinking about how we learn languages will show us that
- learning about culture is an authentic part of language learning.
 - learning about culture supports language learning.
 - culture is a secondary aspect of language learning.
 - culture is a significant aspect of language learning.
- (10) The main idea of this passage is that
- human languages are very diverse.
 - culture should be studied to learn about humans.
 - language structures determine how we experience life.
 - language reflects the culture of a speaker.

Note for Précis:

(1) The paraphrasing mark impacts marks for other sections:

If the answer is completely 'lifted' from the text the précis receives 0 marks for all sections other than length (0-1 marks).

If the précis is mostly 'lifted' (i.e. only a few lines are paraphrased), the précis receives 1 mark for paraphrasing, marks for length (0-1 marks) and no other marks.

If the answer contains some 'lifted' (copied) content (i.e., a mark of 1-3), the marks for content, paraphrasing, organization, accuracy of language are to be calculated only for the parts that are not plagiarized.

Some keywords are difficult to paraphrase and may appear in the précis as is: e.g. 'diversity', 'culture', 'language'. Some common or widely used words, such as 'different' or 'experience', can be used without penalty.

(2) The précis does not need to follow the organization of the original text. However, it should have a smooth 'flow' and internal coherence. The main ideas of the original text are given in boldface to aid the marking.

SAMPLE PRECIS

People belong to different cultural groups which leads them to experience life differently. Even though communities speak different languages, these different languages do not create the differences amongst people. Rather, since people in different cultures speak different languages, these differences are expressed through different ways of using. There have been attempts to show that differences in language leads to differences in ways of thinking. However, such experiments in thought and language have not been useful in making us understand how people live differently as much as other subjects in the social sciences. Still, languages have significant differences in their structures. Despite these differences, every language is able to express the same things about people. In comparison, the cultural differences that are shown through language are superficial. In summary, studies of culture show differences between social groups, but studying language allows us to understand how humans are similar. (147 words)

Question 3 (Unseen prose passage)
(20 arks)

3. Read the following passage and answer the questions given below it, using your own words as far as possible.

The Track in the Middle of the Forest

The most ferocious bears live deep in the heart of the taiga.⁴

Not a single one has ever been hunted.

Hunters know they are very dangerous, they say the bears think, like men, and that is why they never go near them, in the heart of the taiga. They are frightened, are aware of the dangers of paths that never end, of tracks that fork time and again until the man who dares penetrate so far finds himself turning in circles, sometimes in spirals, until the time comes when he dares not move until a rescue party reaches him. That is the taiga; no one wants to risk going in, the only way to enter the taiga is by cutting, burning and destroying it. Even so the taiga wins out.

They say that those who get lost in the taiga pray and believe their prayers will save them, but not so. God is great, but the taiga is even greater, and they can pray as fervently as they curse, howl and rage, the taiga is deaf to their words, and that is why hunters can't even agree to go in too deep, they hesitate, argue, curse, but always retreat to the outer fringe of trees. The most ferocious bears are deep inside, men who changed into bears, and that is why they are so vicious, because they are evil like men and think like men, their instinct is not an animal's, is not what an animal is born with, but a mixture of the viciousness of men and the cruelty of animals, they are wild beasts but it is said that when they look at you, it is as if they are thinking hard, and their eyes are glinting.

Once, before they had built the villages that surround the taiga, many, many years ago, there was a party of beaters that went into the taiga to hunt for skins. Everyone knew that what they really wanted were the skins of the bears who live in the centre of the forest, legends abounded about the thickness and value of these skins....

They trekked for days and days. They say the hunters watched their supplies run out, and that day after day, for far too long, they only ate birds they could catch and the mushrooms that grew all around. Weeks went by and the hunters continued their trek further into the forest, penetrating deeper and deeper inside. Their beards were long and their hair matted. They hadn't washed for days and their clothes were filthy from sleeping in the open, from walking through mud and thickets, from the blood of the animals they had killed in order to eat. They stank of forest, of dry leaves and flattened plants, of sweat and of the smoke from the fires they lit each night to keep warm. And they went even further into the taiga, even on days when the mist hid the sun, further in, even though they were lost, and didn't know where they were going. And they kept losing items of clothing and had to wrap up in non-cured skins of animals they were killing with knives, spears and bows, because their powder had got wet and they had thrown their guns away, along with the lead ammunition that had weighed too much ...

And finally, to communicate with each other, and because they were afraid of the bears, who couldn't be far away, they mimicked the screech of owls and the hisses of wild cats, and almost stopped speaking. They decided to light no more fires so the animals couldn't detect their presence and ate raw meat.

By the time they finally saw the bears, they were crawling on all fours, wore the skins of other animals, had turned wild, stank and were filthy. The bears sniffed and encircled them but did no harm: there was no difference between them. The hunters didn't recognize each other and thought the bears were other hunters and hunters were bears.

But that is only a fable, because nobody ever emerged from the taiga to say what really happened. That is why men are afraid to enter the taiga, because within every forest there is a track that will lead them inside, into its heart. (764 words)

Adapted from a translation of a short story published in Russian 1922 by Jossef Bergchenko

- (1) What role does the taiga play in this story? Provide examples to support your answer. (04 marks)
- (2) What is the main literary device used to bring out the taiga's fearsome quality? Illustrate this with at least two examples. (05 marks)
- (3) How is the passing of time conveyed in this story? Refer to language as well as imagery in your explanation. (03 marks)
- (4) What does the phrase "But that is only a fable" convey to you? Who says these words? (03 marks)
- (5) At the end of the story, are the bears human or the humans bears? What would be the difference? (05 marks)

Answers different to those provided below are acceptable if supported by quotations and illustrations from the passage.

Questions 1 is marked out of 04 marks. Questions 2 and 4 are marked out of 03 marks. Questions 3 and 5 are to be marked out of 05 marks each. Half marks are possible (E.g: 3.5, 2.5, 1.5 etc.)

Q1	Q2 & Q5	Q3 & Q4
04 marks	05 marks	03 marks	A complete answer which shows a full understanding of the question and addresses every part of the question. 2 or more relevant points written, with supporting details for each from the passage, either as quotations or as direct references (which are appropriate) to the passage
02-03 marks	02-04 marks	02 marks	A moderately good answer which includes 1-2 relevant points in response to the question, with supporting details from the passage
01 mark	01 mark	01 mark	An answer with only 1 or 2 relevant points, and no supporting details
0 marks			No answer or irrelevant answer

Note 1: No marks should be deducted for language errors.

Note 2: These answers are guidelines only. All points provided here need not be in the answer. As per the marking scheme, the answer needs to contain only 2 points which may be different to that provided below.

(1) What role does the taiga play in this story? Provide examples to support your answer (04 marks)

- The taiga is the setting but can also be another character in the story
- It is an important part of the plot as the transformation of men to bears happens within the taiga
- The taiga is described as a live being

(2) What is the main literary device used to bring out the taiga's fearsome quality? Illustrate this with at least two main points. (05 marks)

- The taiga is personified: the story describes the taiga as a living thing.
- It actively leads hunters deeper into itself or leads them astray; by doing this, it also transforms the men into bears.
- It is also described as 'greater than God' and in that sense, awesome
- It is shown to be stern or uncaring since 'the taiga is deaf to their [hunters'] words' and leads men into the wilderness and changes their being
- Imagery/phrases that students may use - "heart of the taiga", the "taiga wins out", "greater than God", "the taiga is deaf to their words". "lead them inside", "its heart"

To receive full marks, personification has to be explicitly stated, and two points illustrated with examples.

(3) How is the passing of time conveyed in this story? Refer to language as well as imagery in your explanation. (03 marks)

- It talks of the transformation of the men into wild things. Uses phrases such as "trekked for days and days", "day after day, for far too long", "Weeks went by"
- Describes what the hunters ate after supplies ran out, how their beards grew longer, not washing, lost clothes, and stopped talking.

(4) What does the phrase "But that is only a fable" convey to you, the reader? Who says these words? (03 marks)

- Universal third person narrator – Possibly someone who has lived nearby and has knowledge of the taiga and villages nearby.
- It sheds doubt on the specifics of the story but at the same time, makes you think the story is even more real!

(5) At the end of the story, are the bears human or the humans bears? What would be the difference? (05 marks)

- This is a difficult question and requires an imaginative answer.
- It appears from the penultimate paragraph that the humans and bears are indistinguishable at the end ("there is no difference")
- This would lead us to question whether being a hunter of such magnificent creatures is right
- If we consider being human to mean that we have values and qualities we call 'human', then it can be argued that the roles re-reversed, the bears are more human than the humans, until they too become bears and fear their hunters

Question 4 (Unseen Poem)

4. Read the following poem and answer the questions given below it, using your own words as far as possible. (20 marks)

Death is not New

Every city is ours
And all are kin
Good and evil do not come from others
Pain and its relief are no different
Death too is not new
We do not rejoice when life seems sweet
Nor do we cry it's bitter when troubled
For this we know from the discerning:
As frail craft caught in rivers crashing down rocks
Swollen with cold rain pouring
Through skies split by lightning,
Our lives too
Are tossed around by the fates.
We do not therefore praise the mighty for their rise
Even less do we disdain the lowly.

(Translated from a 2000-year old Tamil poem)

- (1) Why is 'every city ours' and 'all [our] kin'? Support your answer with close reference to the poem. (3 marks)
- (2) What does the poet mean by the following lines: "good and evil do not come from other / Pain and its relief are no different"? (4 marks)
- (3) According to the poet, what insight has been learned from perceptive persons? (3 marks)
- (4) In your view, how effective is the central simile of the poem? (5 marks)

Answers different to the ones given below are acceptable if supported by quotations and illustrations from the poem.

Q 1 Q 3	Q2	Q4 & Q5
03 marks	04 marks	04-05 marks	A complete answer which shows a full understanding of the question and addresses every part of the question. 2 or more relevant points written, with supporting details for each from the poem, either as quotations or as direct references (which are appropriate) to the poem
02 marks	03 marks		A moderately good answer which includes 1-2 relevant points in response to the question, with supporting details from the poem
	02 marks		An answer which includes 1-2 relevant points, but may have no/inadequate supporting details from the poem
0.5 - 1 mark	0.5 - 1 mark		An answer with only 1 relevant point, and no supporting details
0 marks			No answer or irrelevant answer

Note 1: No marks should be deducted for language errors.

Note 2: These answers are guidelines only. All points provided here need not be in the answer. As per the marking scheme, the answer needs to contain only 2 points maximum which may be different to that provided below.

(1) Why is 'every city ours' and 'all [our] kin'? Support your answer with close reference to the poem. (03 marks)

- Every city is ours because death comes to all humans as well as the pain, and suffering and relief that comes to everyone
- In no city can you escape death
- Since every person has this same inheritance (of death and illness, good and bad etc.) everyone is related to each other
- Appropriate imagery to support the answer should be used.

(2) What does the poet mean by the following lines: "good and evil do not come from other / Pain and its relief are no different"?(04 marks)

- In every person there is a capacity to make good and evil choices
- There is good and evil in each person
- Pain and relief are fruits of the choices we make
- These two pairs of concepts (good-evil & pain-relief) are connected to each other

(3) According to the poet, what insight has been learned from perceptive persons?

(03 marks)

- That it is hard to predict changes that may occur
- People are subject to fate which can bring unforeseen events
- That people different or difficult circumstances have not brought in on themselves
- That we are all the same and not always in control of our lives

(4) In your view, how effective is the central simile of the poem?

(05 marks)

- Note: student answers may agree or disagree on the effectiveness of the simile; however, suitable supportive arguments must be made whatever position they take.
- Effective – central simile of a little boat caught in a swollen river shows how insignificant our lives and choices are in the face of time and circumstances.
- Ineffective – central simile only highlights the negative aspects – it does not draw out the joys and relief that is common to all; the simile is dated and not very original.

(5) What, in your view, is the main idea of the poem?

(05 marks)

- This is a difficult question and should be marked with some leniency
- That humans are similar and differences in wealth and circumstance do not reflect fundamental differences amongst us
- Given the circumstances of our lives, and the lack of control over our lives, neither blame nor praise of others is useful or justified.
- Both the mighty and the lowly are treated equally by the fates
- For a full answer, students should analyse the imagery, rhythm of the lines
