(iii) When people perform their duties well towards each other, progress in the entire society would be the result. According to the teachings of the Buddha, the entire society has been divided into six groups and six directions have been given as similes to these groups. Worshipping the directions means performing of ones relevant duties well without fail. Teachers should perform their duties towards their pupil well and the pupils should perform their duties well towards their teachers. When the other social groups of the society becomes a reality. Faith and co-relationship between each of these social groups become firm and the human bonds become strong. Accordingly ones privileges too will become secured. This shows that the progress of the entire society would be a reality when each one performs his/her duties mutually. (5 marks)
